On-X® continues to be uniquely positioned for the younger AVR patient backed by contemporary clinical evidence

The On-X Aortic Valve provides patients with the survival benefit of a mechanical valve and a lower bleeding risk without compromising their safety.[2,3]

New Clinical Data Supports the Unique Position of On-X

SAVR > TAVR

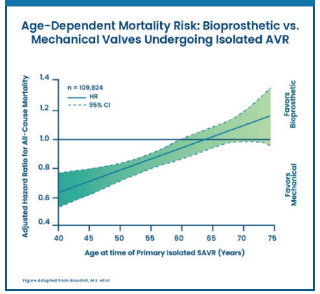

in patients younger than 65 years

TAVR was associated with a 2.3-fold greater risk (+130%) of 6-year mortality when compared to SAVR in patients <65.[4]

Mechanical AVR > Bioprosthetic AVR

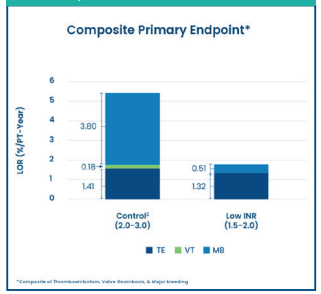

in patients 60 years and younger

10-year all-cause mortality favors mechanical valves in patients ≤60 (independently risk-adjusted)[2] when compared to bioprosthetic valves for AVR.

On-X > Other Mechanical Valves

with differentiated, proven clinical benefit[3]

At a lower INR (1.5-2.0), On-X Aortic demonstrated an 87% decrease in major bleeding with no increase in thromboembolism and zero valve thrombosis when compared to standard anticoagulation therapy (INR 2.0-3.0).[3]

*Reduce INR after 3 months of standard therapy. See On-X Prosthetic Heart Valve Instructions for Use.
